editorial

Is it possible for science and religion to join forces and become a single field of knowledge? This vital question has been bothering people for some time. Those interested in metaphysics and parapsychology are pondering it more and more, and many scientists are also becoming interested in it — research in this subject is being done at places like the Menninger Clinic and the Stanford Research Institute.

The seekers of truth fall into two main categories: those who wish to explore the path of modern religion and to branch out into such old fields as yoga and buddhism, and those who choose to find the answers through science and mathematics, using experimental methods and analytical proofs.

Today we have reached a new stage in history. Although no one yet fully understands both the religious and the scientific approaches, many are at least beginning to look in both directions. In Russia and the U.S., much research is being done on auras and ESP. Scientists are now investigating psychics, and psychics are allowing themselves to work with scientists more comfortably than ever before. Although the progress is slow, since scientists are only willing to approach famous or highly educated people, at least it is being openly admitted that something might exist which is not explainable in terms of matter, time, and space. Science is looking in new directions for answers.

If they go far enough, both scientists and religionists will be forced to the conclusion that the ultimate reality lies in the realm of mind and spirit. Both scientists and religionists already agree that behind all material appearances lies a non-physical reality. Thus, they are gradually reaching the viewpoints held by humanity's greatest seers. Science and religion are becoming one. In time, this will be recognized even by those who now cling most desperately to the notion that only one of these two routes to knowledge can be correct. In the meantime, we who already understand what is happening are living in a state of excitement and anticipation, because we know we are witnessing the coming together of these two traditional antagonists. It is we who have the privilege of being close to these discoveries as they are made. And it is because of us that many of these things are taking place. We can participate in this great adventure by continuing to be seekers of truth, and by not allowing ourselves to be over-ridden by those who are merely looking for fame and fortune. Our adventure can be the beginning of the salvation of this world.

KORLA PANDIT

FEATURED AT THE ORGAN - DEC. 6

Korla Pandit, the East Indian organist whose turban and dark eyes were familar to Bay Area television viewers during the 50's will be featured at the Candle-lighting Service on December 6 in Santa Clara. Korla Pandit has a charisma that becomes an intragral part of his performance, because Korla doesn't play for himself, but for the universe. The audience will be able to sense and feel the oneness of the universe, the beautiful moments of life with someone else, the true spirit of Christmas. Together with the San Jose University Chorus and the beauty of a candlelit room, peace, love and harmony should abound.

Korla Pandit's own compositions reflect his transcendental approach to music, his affirmation in the beauty of the human soul, and linked with his music, a common meeting place for all the peoples of the world. Mr. Pandit born in New Delhi, India, was a musically gifted child. His father, a member of one of India's first families, and his European-born mother nurtured the talent, allowing it to expand and ripen in an international atmosphere. The professional career of Korla Pandit has been a succession of impressive "firsts" in concert and television presentations, nationally as well as locally, in Hollywood and New York. He is responsible for several innovations in organ consctruction and interpretation, including Indian drum and percussive effects previously untried.

Korla Pandit brings deep spiritual contemplation to his music, but his primary goal is to create beautiful music for you, the listener. His skill and finesse, combined with a profound conviction in the divine nature of music, and his deep metaphysical and spiritual background, explain why listening to his music is a refreshing emotional experience. In Korla Pandit's won words:
"Music may not save your soul, but it can cause your soul to be worth saving".

COMMUNICATING WITH PLANTS

by Marcel Vogel

FOUR years ago I was a typical hard-headed scientist, and at first I felt uncomfortable when I began to ponder and explore areas of ESP which operated from what seemed to be 'impossible' hypotheses. However, my many experiments with plants, using the concentrated energy of my own thoughts to affect them, has convinced me completely that man can indeed communicate with plant life on a mental level. I thought of myself as a religious person before, but now I feel I have been changed to a spiritual person as a result of my scientific observations and conclusions working with plants. I find myself being brought closer and closer to God, or 'Universal Consciousness'. And I now believe that God is within both human individuals and plants.

Although my forecasts, which follow, about future ESP contact with plants is speculative, and much more research must be done, I am already convinced of many things. For example, plants do not really 'think for themselves' as many people believe. Plants are among the simpler forms of life. They are deaf, dumb, and blind. In reality, a plant is not a very sensitive object, except to light and other electro-magnetic vibrations. A plant obviously can't move away from where it is rooted, so it must have a code built into it for precise adaptation to the environment which it is in.

A plant is a stable, emotionally balanced organism, but it does not 'think' for itself. In my research I discovered that a plant is very sensitive to a person's focused thought. I found that I could literally 'take possession' of the plant's life-form with strong, focused thoughts. This is really a type of astral projection: One's personal thought-form pervades the living plant and subdues the life-form of the plant. The plant's life-form then becomes separated and falls under the control of the human mind.

To confirm and measure this phenomenon, I developed a sophisticated monitoring machine which, after being fastened to the leaf of a plant by stainless steel electrodes, measures the reaction of the plant to various thoughts. The reaction is recorded as lines on graph paper. Early in my experiments --- before trying any 'thought transfer' techniques --- I found that a plant would respond to the starting of a car over one hundred feet away, indicating a sensitivity to electro-static forces. This was confirmed by the appearance of wavy lines on the graph paper unit attached to the measuring machine. I also found that plants are very sensitive to changes of temperature, and will react if the temperature is changed by as little as five degrees. The plant, then, is a very sensitive photo-electric instrument.

Prior to my transference of energy to the plant by thought, the graph lines indicated a mass confusion of sensitivity. The breakthrough came when I found that I could control and stabilize the base line running along the graph paper simply by focusing thoughts of love on the plant! This, it turned out, gave me complete control over the plant! I learned to 'become one' with a plant by releasing the energy of my thoughts into the plant in a concentrated beam. I then worked to steady the oscillating graph lines with my continued thought until the base line stabilized. At that point I found I had firm control. So, it is the energy in one's thoughts, released through the act of focusing, that enters the plant and is absorbed. When this happens, the plant no longer responds normally, because it has been overwhelmed by man's thought-energy. The normal pattern of its life-form is literally pushed aside by one's concentrated thought. A plant becomes insensitive to its own normal responses; it falls under man's control.

In all my research I've never seen any real evidence of primary intelligence in a plant. I have concluded that the responses one sees, come from the experimenter -- not from the plant. The plant becomes an 'instrument' for measuring the thought patterns --- the bio-energetic releases --- that are coming from the mind of the experimenter. And, if he is properly attuned to the plant, his every nuance of thought is expressed in graphical form via the monitoring machine. In other words, by working with a plant and a special monitoring machine, a person's thoughts and emotions can be displayed.

Luther Burbank modified the growth of his plants by his own thoughts. His published works reveal that he actually talked to his plants, and communicated his thoughts directly to the genetic code of the plants. That is how he achieved genetic variation. He visualized the form he desired, focused his thought on the seedling, and then started the process of selective identification of the characteristics he wished the plant to express.

Burbank wrote about the importance of mental communication with a plant form. He stated that there was an energetic exchange between the thought forms of man and plant. I, too, have found this to be true --- by proving that the energy of thought can increase or retard the growth of a plant. When I focus thought into a plant, the plant stops growing. There is absolutely no further physical growth --- no new leaves. The plant, however, remains vital and green, even without watering. I generally use philodendrons in my experiments, and when I focus my thought into one of them, the plant becomes completely insensitive to light. It appears to be isolated from external influences. When I disonnect my mind from the plant, saying: "I am finished working with you, and this is the end of the experiment", a new growth will begin within twenty-four hours.

My claims can be easily verified by some very simple tests. Remove two leaves from a plant such as a philodendron or saxifragia. Take one of these leaves and hold it in your hand. Then focus on it this thought: that you wish it to continue to live. Do this for about one minute. Then take the other leaf --- the "control" --- and do nothing with it at all. Simply place the two leaves together, side by side, and do not touch them any more. Examine the leaves daily. You will notice, if your focused thought was strong enough, that the leaf you willed to live will remain green and will not deteriorate, compared to the "control" leaf, which will begin to wither. I have found that the "treated" leaf remains green and vital for as long as two months, while the "control" leaf withers and dies.

If you try a similar experiment with bean seed pods, you will see a thirty or forty per cent increase in the growth of seeds which have been infused with the thought of vital and increased growth.

The growth of plants can be increased by focusing on a pitcher of water for four or five minutes the thought that the water will increase the growth of the plants. My theory is that the mind's energy is stored in the water molecules in the pitcher, which then pass into the plant. The profound implication is that healing energy and other strong thought-forms are stored in water molecules in the human body. We are dealing here with a common denominator: the water molecule. Through it, the internal reality of self may be modified by thought.

Another conclusion I have reached is that the energy contents of positive and negative thoughts are quite different. A negative thought is much more powerful than a positive one, probably because there is often greater emotion connected with negative thinking. I have found that strong, negative emotions have an enormous effect on plant life and on the equipment used to measure the response in plants. A strong negative thought directed toward a plant stops all responses and several days are needed for that energy to dissipate in the plant. The equipment I work with often goes "dead" after I feed the plant a pulse of negative energy, and it sometimes takes two or three weeks before I can get it to function properly again. The negative thought goes in like a knife ... everything stops. After that, I get no response at all. The machine works perfectly well with other plants, but not with the one which has been negated.

There is a profound warning to man here: The negative thoughts man releases are so energetic that they break apart the normal structure of what we call a "psyche". Negative thoughts make such structures inoperative. Most of us do not have an adequate defense against negative thoughts. Consequently, these thoughts can often penetrate our psychic shields and do us great harm. Incredible as it may seem, I have been literally lifted up and pushed against a wall by the negative thought used by one of my associates. A strong, destructive thought-form can definitely affect us physically.

We can learn to protect ourselves from negative threats by charging ourselves with positive thoughts and by using various breathing techniques to increase the positive energy in our minds and bodies.

Using plants as measuring tools, I have found that the bio-energetic response is much higher when the experimenter develops a very "singular" form of thinking, in which all secondary distractions are suppressed. We should therefore all learn to think in a "singular" way, rather than weaken the power of our thoughts by thinking in "multiple" fashion. In other words, thought should be strongly focused on one thing at a time.

My work with plants suggests dramatic possibilities for the future. It is my speculation that in three to five years plants may be used as "watchdogs" to protect homes. Once you condition a plant, you can use it for sensing --- just as you can a watchdog. By sensitizing a plant before I leave the house, I can then leave, yet still be present as far as the plant is concerned. Then, in case any danger arises of the house being broken into, I myself can sense it because of the plant's gathering of the data and my sensitivity to the plant. At the same time, the plant can trigger an alarm as soon as it senses an intruder's menacing intentions.

Another positive application is the use of plants in helping the sick. The plant, in this case, would be previously conditioned by the positive, healthy thoughts of the person who gives it to someone ill.

Not all the implications of my experiments are pleasant ones. For example, a beautiful plant might be made into a source of evil, because once the psyche of a plant is invaded and taken over --- which is really a type of "possession" --- it can be reshaped in either a positive or a negative manner. A plant could be charged with negative vibrations, which in turn could be transferred to an unsuspecting party, doing him great harm. And he would not even know what was happening to him.

I also see the possibility of controlling the growth of crops on a large scale by thought. If the technique works on one plant, why not on thousands?

Plants may not speak to the scientist in the language he is used to, but they certainly speak in their own effective way. They are very powerful laboratory tools for understanding "inner" man. Plant experimentation has confirmed what we already knew from other sources: the power of love. Love is a very real form of energy. What this energy really is, science does not yet know. But we nevertheless know it exists. We must learn to use this energy to benefit our total selves: our bodies, our minds, and our spirits. ● ● ●

Bermuda Triangle Investigation

INTERVIEW WITH

by Patricia Wortman

P Since we wrote the article for the August issue, what plans have been made for future expeditions to the Bermuda Triangle, and what are you going to do down there?

T There is an expedition in progress at the present time. You remember I told you that we were planning a six-month expedition? It is now going on. The amount of money available for this expedition is really phenomenal! And we feel that the monetary expenditure will eventually prove its worth. In past expeditions we tried to go under water with scuba gear, but the only place we were able to see anything with this method was at Bimini, because of the shallow water. The pyramid is actually in about 10,000 feet of water, and no human that I know of is able to swim that deep. So we have to use other methods, and that requires an outlay of a good sum of money.

P How long has the group been in the Triangle?

T Today is the seventh day.

P Have you had any reports from the expedition since it left?

T No, because they are in the Triangle. They are living in the Triangle on the boat. They're out at sea, and the radio does not work in the Triangle. They'll be coming into port for supplies, because the boat is not big enough to hold all they need for that length of time. We should be receiving monthly reports.

P How many people are on the trip?

T There are eleven mediums, four technical specialists, plus the captain of the boat and two other crew members. That's a total of 18. Many of the present mediums do not know what we've done, what we have experienced. We haven't told them anything. We want them to experience it so they can say in all honesty, "I saw it myself".

P How were these people selected?

T They were selected by their aptitude for mediumship. We are not disclosing their names yet, for the simple reason that they would be bombarded with questions, and people's letters and telephone calls and whatnot. They all felt that it would be best not to list their names until after we publish our findings.

P Have you noticed any molecular changes in your body since you made the first trip into the Triangle?

T Molecular changes? How do you mean?

P I have heard that there have been changes in the astronauts after they have returned from trips into space. Some psychics feel that the people who go into the Triangle would experience the same types of changes. Only, they might be more spiritual in nature; perhaps a form of overshadowing. In any case, there are changes — in the body's cells.

T Yes, Pat, I did discover some changes in my body's cells. It's hard to believe, but I can no longer doubt that it is true: when I went to the Triangle, I had stomach cancer. I don't have it now. I first noticed a change in me four days after we returned from the Triangle. My medical records now confirm this.

P Has this sort of thing happened to other people on the trips?

T Yes. One of the mediums we used for trance mediumship had been blind for 35 years. She now sees. Her eyesight came back two days after we returned to port.

P A channel friend of mine was interested in this subject because of what his group had picked up — that there would be a change in the physical bodies of the people who went into the Triangle.

T I'll buy that, up to a point. The point is that only those people who needed healing, received that healing. Only in extreme cases did healing take place, though. One person cut his thumb while peeling an apple, for example. The cut healed of its own accord, through the body's ordinary process of healing.

I don't know if anyone is more spiritual as the result of the Triangle. One of the mediums we used is just as nutty as when I first met him, and he certainly could have used a healing in that area if anyone could. But I think that the people involved are the ones who would have to answer for themselves.

P When you first went into the Triangle, you discovered a tablet, right?

T I was fishing, and I hooked into the tablet. That was the first tablet. We now have a total of nine tablets.

P Have you been able to get any archeological background on them or any factual material?

T The only factual material we have is the approximate age of these tablets. There is one tablet — in fact, two tablets — that go back 400,000 years and more, according to carbon tests. This indicates to us very strongly that the material in the tablets is man made. We understand that a test can be 10,000 years off, one way or the other. But compared to 400,000 years, this is not a very large uncertainty.

P Has anyone found out what the material is?

T No, we still don't know what the material is. It is so hard that we cannot chip it with a hammer and chisel, and it defies a diamond drill.

P Has anyone deciphered the writing yet?

T No. And we have the best experts working on it.

P Have you tried to solve this problem psychically?

T Yes, and we have learned that the "key" lies in Mt. Shasta.

P Is there an active "triangle" between Mt. Shasta, the pyramid at Giza, and the pyramid you have been investigating in the Bermuda Triangle?

T We don't really know. We hope to find out on the present expedition. This is just one of the tests we're going to make.

P How will you investigate this?

T Well, we don't quite know what we are looking for. We do know that there is a pyramid down there. We do know that there are buildings down there. We do know that there is some type of force that is letting us in and letting us out without harming us or "absorbing" us. We do know that there is some type of force that has healed, but we don't know what it is. We are compiling all the information we can get on the spot — as far as our trance mediums can go.

P Are you going to be doing any research other than through the mediums — such as filming, or underwater diving?

T We won't do any underwater diving because we cannot dive that deep, but we will do what we have done before. We have sent a video camera down to take video tape photographs, and have sent down movie cameras. We have 25,000 feet of film of the pyramid. You can see the pyramid very clearly and the symbols that are written on the buildings and statues. Very, very few statues. Everything seems to be perfectly preserved. The carvings on the buildings are very clear. There is no marine life growing on them — no mollusks of any kind, no barnacles; nothing of that sort is attached to the buildings themselves.

P Would this be because of the force fields around these buildings?

T I don't know. I would assume so. They are protected in some way, because all the buildings, from what we have seen on our films, are intact. They're perfectly preserved. The buildings seem to be made from the same porous material as the tablets, but the pyramid is not. The pyramid is made out of something else. It is metallic or crystalline on the outside. It's a coating. At least, we suspect it's a coating.

P Would this be the same type of coating that was on the capstone at Giza?

T I'm not familiar with that.

P That was, I believe, some kind of metal.

T Well, we suspect that these are plates, or a coating, because some of the sonar soundings that we made took less time to go through the pyramid than they would have, had it been solid metal.

P Were you able to detect rooms within the pyramid?

T Oh, yes. There are eleven rooms in the pyramid.

P That seems like a very significant number.

T It would seem so. The number of buildings around the pyramid is 22.

P Are these buildings with pillars, or are they square, or what?

T They are dome-shaped.

P Round?

P How far are they from the pyramid?

T I don't think we have measured yet. I don't remember if that is in the reports or not.

P Is this like a city around the pyramid? Are the buildings in a circle around the pyramid?

T They are in a perfect circle around the pyramid, as far as we can tell.

P Do you have any idea why?

T No. We sure wish we did. This is one of the things we are trying to find out. We have one heck of a lot to learn and we are not sure that we are learning correctly. This is frustrating for me, and we are anxious to get on with Mt. Shasta and the "key".

JEANNE BORGEN had a dream, to bring tohether the people in the fields of metaphysics and parapsychology, and pay them honor. Her dream was to give thanks to those who have paved the way for others to follow. To pay homage to the leaders in the field. Her dream was to have an "Oscar Award" for the metaphysician. Thus resulted the first "GENIE AWARDS" which were presented in San Francisco on Oct. 3, 1974. The first performance was not largely attended, but an idea was born, built upon the dream of a very lovely psychic lady. Future GENIE AWARDS will be voted upon by a group of organizations, each organization having one vote in each field, thus bringing about a true represantation of the greats in the field. Catagories will cover each section of the work being done in new age work. Each recipient will recieve a Genie, a lady emerging from an alladin's lamp, looking back in retrospect. Jeanne Borgen is to be commended for bringing into existance this wonderful new yearly affair. This years awards were given to: EDGAR MITCHELL, Psychic Research; JEANE DIXON, Prophecy; BRAD STEIGER, Writer of the Yaer; CARROLL RICHTER, Astrology; COL. ARTHUR BURKS, Reincarnation: SYBIL LEEK, Occult Studies; URI GELLER, Psychic of the Year, MASTER SUBRAMUNIYA, The Spiritual Award.

MY FAMILY, INC. is a remarkably successful drug abuse program, organized around new age concepts. The program, at Patton State Hospital near San Bernardino, Calif., uses metaphysical aids and self-hypnosis to teach self-motivation and ethical precepts to hard core drug addicts who might otherwise simply end up in prison. According to PATRICK & VELDA FAIRCHILD, who teach classes at Patton, those who are being helped by this drug program are often young people who have experienced severe parental rejection and are starving for love and consideration. Once in the program, they enter the first stage, called "Our Program" for an indefinite period. When they feel they are ready, they graduate to the second stage, called "My Family", where they remain for 18 months.

It is this program's personal approach, and the fact that it treats the whole person — mind and body — which seems to be responsible for its success in putting these people's lives back together again.

A Legal Victory

by Leamord Worthington

Although we have a long, long way to go before we are successful in achieving certain necessary changes in the statutes governing permissible healing practices, and allowing prophecy, spirit mediumship, astrology and other related gifts to be practiced without subjecting its practitioners to criminal prosecution, the Sacramento Federal Court has recently enunciated certain wide-ranging principles of law which are most encouraging.

In an excellently worded opinion, Federal Judge James Patton ruled in the case of Universal Life Church, Inc. vs. The United States of America that neither the Court nor any branch of the government will consider the merits or fallacies of any religion, nor will the Court compare the beliefs, dogmas and practices of a newly organized religion with those of an older, more established religion. It also added that the Court will not praise or condemn a religion, however excellent or fanatical or preposterous it may seem, for to do so would impinge upon the guarantees of the First Amendment of the Constitution.

This strong, courageous and sound decision by Judge Patton gives promise of greater respect and recognition by the State Courts of the freedom of religious practices accorded by the U.S. Constitution. Those branches of the government which in the past have interfered with legitimate religious practices, and which have actually prosecuted ministers in the performance of their authorized duties, would do well to note this decision and to curtail their abusive practices.

Neither the U.S. Consitution nor the Holy Bible attempt to define the word "religion". It has been proposed that man's recognition of the existence of a Higher Power, or of something or someone far greater, more intelligent, more loving and powerful than man himself, is his religion. It would include his reverence and worship of that power as well as the means which he selects to give evidence of his belief as manifesting his desire to become one with it and to express it in his daily life and in his relationship with his fellow man.

The only limitations which any branch of the government should be allowed to impose on a person's practice of his religior must be confined to those instances where public health or safety are clearly threatened by allowing one to indulge in his religious beliefs. It would not include those cases where someone "might" be injured or hurt, but only were the inevitable result of a religious practice would be most likely to cause harm to the general populace. To legislate otherwise would be an improper interference with one's religious freedom. Both the driving of an automobile and the drinking of alcoholic beverages are likely to cause harm to other persons or can reasonably cause injury, yet these are not prohibited. So should it be with the practice of one's religion or any demonstration of his talents in the fields of prophecy, ESP, clairvoyance and the like.

Kundalini: Key To Human Evolution

by John White

Rightly understood, there is no conflict between religion and science; these are alternative methods of probing the nature of our existence. Each has some important things to tell us about creation, and each should have its place in an intelligent person's approach to living. It is therefore of extreme significance to find spiritual teachers and enlightened masters beginning to encourage a scientific examination of the claims of religion.

This is exactly what Gopi Krishna is doing. His latest book, Higher Consciousness (just published by Julian Press) is a continuation of The Secret of Yoga (Harper & Row, 1972). Both are worth serious study.

In 1938, after 17 years of meditation, Gopi Krishna experienced the awakening of Kundalini. In his autobiography Kundalini (Shambhala, 1971), he writes: "There was a sound like a nerve thread snapping and instantaneously a silvery streak passed through the spinal cord, exactly like the sinuous movement of a white serpent in rapid flight, pouring an effulgent, cascading shower of brilliant vital energy into my brain, filling my head with a blissful luster ..."

Thus began the development of a higher state of consciousness in him. After more than 30 years experience of mystical unity with God, along with the spontaneous development of psychic and intellectual and artistic powers, Gopi Krishna feels called upon to help the West in its spiritual development. He seeks no followers and has nothing to promote except this simple message: through the awakening of Kundalini energy, which is the biological basis for evolution, people may attain a new state of consciousness. And because of our present critical condition, especially with regard to nuclear weapons, it is the only way the human race can survive. "The awakening of Kundalini is the greatest enterprise and most wonderful achievement in front of man," he says.

A change of consciousness is necessary. And such a change is attainable by arousing the Nov. 4: THE HISTORY OF ATLANTIS, a film by GARY VARNEY. He will also show slides from the 1973 Pepperdine University expedition to Spain and Ireland in search of evidence of the lost continent. He will explain "psychic archeology" in terms of his current investigation using bio-feedback as a means of reaching below the threshold of consciousness. Then, this sensitivity (the same as in dowsing) is used as a bio-physical means of detecting artifacts and ancient archeological sites.

Nov. 11: A DIVER'S VIEW OF ATLANTIS, by BARRY SEARS. Mr. Sears will describe the underwater blocks, columns, roads, and markings which he has observed in Spain and Ireland. He will compare his own observations with newspaper accounts received in this country. He will discuss the history of the Bimini blocks and illustrate by slides how they are similar in relationship to those in Spain and Ireland. He was a member of the staff of the Pepperdine expedition in 1973 and on the Bimini expedition with Maxine Asher in 1974.

Nov. 18: ATLANTIS IN ANTARTICA, by AL BOWERS, discussing possibilities of past civilizations in Antartica and cataclysmic events obscuring them——an interesting and controversial view.

Nov. 25: THE REALITY OF AN ATLANTIS. SUZANNE CRAYSON will present evidence which will put Atlantis in a completely different historical perspective due to an ancient misinterpretation in the measurement of time. She has spent years researching pre-history, and she was editor of Maxine Asher's new book, Discovering Atlantis.

BREAKTHROUGH:

SRI & more

One of the reasons that scientists have been unable to study mediumship, or what is sometimes called "channelling", is that the mind of the subject is known only to the subject and cannot be known by anyone else. The spiritual gift referred to in the writings of St. Paul as the ability to see spirits, or foresee the future, is sometimes called "clairvoyance." The question asked by scientists is: How can we study clairvoyance when we are not even sure that it exists? There is no way for the scientific investigator to see the clairvoyant pictures in the minds of the psychics and mediums. The next question arises, and it is proposed by psychics themselves: How can we explain the different kinds of clairvoyance that are experienced? Some mediums today say that they see spirit persons who show themselves as taking a helpful role in the lives of those they love, but from whom they have been separated by death. Others say that clairvoyance takes the form of seeing scenes in a person's past. Still others say that in their clairvoyance they see the life of the person for whom they are doing a reading, but that the life period is one of perhaps two hundred years ago — the concept of re-incarnation. Some see clairvoyantly into the life of a person, but explain that the scenes they are viewing have not yet happened but are going to happen in the future. A lot of people call that kind of clairvoyance "fortune telling" and overlook that it can assist a person to realize that if the future of an individual can be shown to another person, it must indeed be known first of all in the mind of God, and that a person can be assured thereby of Divine care.

Two important papers have recently been produced by scientists, and by coincidence have been released at the same time. Until now the very question of whether clairvoyance exists at all has never been properly answered. Now clairvoyance has been demonstrated by scientists. The result of this new proof will have far-reaching effects both for the psychic researcher and for those engaged in the field of consciousness research.

At Stanford Research Institute, two scientists reported on experiments with subjects who demonstrate an ability to perceive information not presented to any known sense and blocked from ordinary perception. Dr. Harold Puthoff and Russell Targ, physicists at SRI, presented evidence for the existence of a channel through which information about a remote location can be obtained.

"Our observation of the phenomenon leads us to conclude that experiments in the so-called paranormal phenomena can be scientifically conducted, and it is our hope that other laboratories will intitiate additional research to attempt to replicate these findings," they said.

The scientists said one of ther objectives was to resolve under conditions as unambiguous as possible the basic issue of whether a certain class of paranormal perception phenomena exists.

The scientists described experiments in which:

— Uri Geller, an Israeli subject, reproduced target pictures drawn by experimenters at remote locations while Geller was in an electrically shielded room.

— Pat Price, a former California police commissioner, perceived remote outdoor scenes many miles from their physical location.

— Brain wave recordings (EEGs) were made of subjects isolated in a room, in an effort to determine whether physiological measurements could be made of remote stimuli.

"It may be that remote perceptual ability is widely distributed in the general population," Targ and Puthoff speculated, "but because the perception is generally below an individual's level of awareness, it is repressed or not noticed."

In the experiments with Geller, he was asked to reproduce 13 drawings over a week-long period while physically separated from his experimenters in a shielded room. Geller was not told who made the drawing, who selected it for him to reproduce, or about its method of selection. The researchers said that only after Geller's isolation -- in a double-walled steel room that was acoustically, visually and electrically shielded from them -- was a target picture randomly chosen and drawn. It was never discussed by the experimenters after being drawn or brought near Geller.

Examples of drawings Geller was asked to reproduce included a firecracker, a cluster of grapes, a devil, a horse, the solar system, a tree and an envelope.

Two SRI researchers - - not otherwise associated with the research - - were submitted Geller's reproductions jor judging on a "blind" basis. They matched the target data to the response data with no errors, a chance probability of better than one in a million per judge.

In another experiment with Geller, he was asked to "guess" the face of a die shaken in a closed steel box. The box was vigorously shaken by one of the experimenters and placed on a table. The position of the die was not known to the researchers. Geller provided the correct answers eight times, the researchers said. The probability that this could have occured by chance was about one in a million. The experiment was performed ten times by Geller, he declined to respond two times, saying his perception was not clear.

Targ and Puthoff have noted widespread publicity Geller has received based on the reports that he can bend metal by paranormal means. They said their research with him did not confirm this ability.

"Although metal bending by Geller has been observed in our laboratory, we have not been able to combine such observations with adequately controlled experiments to obtain data sufficient to support paranormal hypothesis."

Encouraged by remote viewing experiments that were conducted with earlier subjects, Targ and Puthoff reported on nine remote-viewing experiments that were conducted with Pat Price as a subject. The SRI team chose natural sites in the San Francisco Bay Area on a a double-blind basis, while Price, who remained at SRI in Menlor Park, California, was asked to describe the location and whatever activities were going on there.

While one SRI experimenter was closeted with Price, a second experimenter would obtain target location from an individual in SRI management not otherwise associated with the research. The targets - - chosen from among 100 in the area - - were clearly differentiated from each other and within 30 minutes driving time from SRI.

The team that had chosen the target proceeded to the location without communicating with the subject. The experimenter remaining behind was not told of the location, and questioned the subject, who described his impressions of the location on a tape recorder.

'The experimental results were subjected to independent judging on a blind basis by five SRI scientists who were not otherwise associated with research", the scientist said. "The judges were asked to match the nine locations, which they independently visited, against the typed manuscripts of the tape-recorded narratives of the remote viewer."

The panel of judges, by a plurality vote, correctly matched six of the nine descriptions and locations, Targ and Puthoff reported. The probability that this could have occured by chance is one in a billion.

In a pilot study with six subjects, the scientists sought to determine whether brain wave recordings (EEGs) could be used as an indicator of information transfer between a subject and a remote flashing light. The study was based on the information that perception may take place below the level of personal awareness.

"We hypothesized that if we stimulated one subject in this manner (a sender), the EEG of another subject in a remote room with no flash present (a receiver), might show changes in alpha activity, and possibly EEG driving similar to that of the sender.

The researchers reported they worked initailly with six volunteer subjects but eventually concentrated on one subject who responded most dramatically. They then measured the subject's EEG for three days, gathering data from seven sets of 36 trials each with the subject, who was in an opaque, acousically and electrically-shielded room seven meters away from the sender.

Targ and Puthoff reported that while five of the subjects performed at chance levels, the sixth showed consistent and significant EEG changes associated with the presence of the remote stimuli under conditions of sensory shielding.

"We hypothesize that the protocol described here may prove to be useful as a screening procedure for latent remote perceptual ability in the general population", they said.

The researchers said that the channel through which information can be received about a remote location appears to be "imperfect", containing noise along with a signal. They said that while a signal-to-noise ratio cannot yet be determined, the channel nonetheless permits functioning at a useful level of information transfer.

Targ and Puthoff said the research constitutes "a first step" toward a goal of uncovering patterns of cause-effect relationships that lend themselves to analysis and hypothesis in the forms with which we are familiar in scientific study.

"We have established under known conditions," they said, "a data base from which departures as a function of physical and psychological variables can be studied in future work.

The research was sponsored by the Foundation for Parasensory Investigation of New York City and the Institute of Noetic Sciences of Palo Alto, California.

AN ICELANDIC MEDIUM:

——Some Recent A S P R Research——

(from an ASPR Journal article by Erlendur Haraldsson, Ph.D. and Ian Stevenson, M.D.*)

Psychical research has always been concerned with the question of whether personality survives death. As Dr. Osis has written, what is needed is not one great "breakthrough" but a variety of empirical approaches. The study of mediumship is one such approach. It is not so prevalent as it once was, for various reasons; the age of the "great mediums" seems to have gone by. However, one gifted medium has recently been tested, under carefully controlled conditions, at the ASPR (American Society for Psychical Research, Inc.), and has shown several very interesting and rather rare abilities.

Hafsteinn Bjornsson is well known in his native Iceland, where members of the Iceland SPR have observed him extensively. He claims to be able to converse with deceased persons, and seems able, sometimes in trance, sometimes not, to give his sitters a great deal of verifiable paranormal information about people they have known. Even more interestingly, he sometimes gives details about their ancestors or predecessors whom they have never known personally. In our experiment we have been able to check out such statements ourselves, because he gives so many details of names and circumstances.

As a professional medium in his own country, Hafsteinn works in two ways: sometimes with a small circle of five to seven sitters, at which times he goes into trance and several distinct personalities communicate. His other method is to hold public meetings where he relays "communications" from presumed discarnate entities to individuals in the rather large audiences. In such meetings he is not in a trance.

Hafsteinn shows an extraordinary facility for giving full personal names. As anyone familiar with the literature of mediumship knows, this is usually a difficult task for mediums. Hafsteinn, however, often gives not only the first name but the second also. In Iceland, this means the father's name, as in Jonsson, Gustafsson etc. Also houses in Iceland, are often given names, which this medium is able to provide in many of his readings.

Another unusual feature of Hafsteinn's mediumship is that his communications often seem to be coming from deceased persons who are two or more generations behind the sitter: that is, they are not parents, uncles, aunts, etc., but sometimes grandparents. Interestingly, in this particular experiment the sitters were mostly young people (Icelanders) who often know very little about their relatives who had died many years ago. But one of our investigative procedures was to follow the cases through, by contacting the sitter's parents and other older people in Iceland; sometimes these older people would recognize names which the youngsters had not identified, and those older people could specifically verify what the medium had said. This procedure (which is not often carried out in research) makes the "telepathy from sitter" hypothesis less tenable.

HOW WAS THIS ASPR EXPERIMENT CONDUCTED?

Any carefully planned experiment in mediumship has to rule out even the slightest possibility of cues (auditory or visual) from the sitter. So in our set-up the psychic and the sitter were almost completely isolated from each other. Yet we wanted to retain conditions which the medium could accept fully—which he was used to—so that his flow of paranormal material would not be blocked by strange surroundings. To keep the two individuals "in contact", while making sure that neither could see or hear the other, we put up in the experimental room a heavy opaque curtain that extended from the ceiling to the floor, Behind it sat the medium and one experimenter (EH), with a tape recorder. Then the other experimenter (IS) went downstairs and brought up a sitter, gave him a chair by the door of the experimental room, and asked him to put in earplugs and to don earphones for stereophonic music. Thus while Hafsteinn was giving his reading (in Icelandic), the sitter was listening to rather loud music which fully masked the medium's voice; and neither the medium nor EH had any way of identifying the sitter since they could not see nor hear him. After the reading the sitter was led downstairs by IS, and then left the building.

The medium was not in trance. He seemed to like this arrangement, as it apparently resembled his customary methods. The set-up was in fact somewhat like his public demonstrations of clairvoyance in Iceland, even though in the experiment he could not see the sitters. He did, however, complain that sometimes the communicators for sitters not only arrived ahead of time but stayed around after the sitter left—so, he said there was quite a lot of "crowding" which confused him.

HOW THE READINGS WERE EVALUATED

All the readings were taped and typed up, and copies of all were then given to each sitter so he could indicate how many statements in each reading seemed applicable to him. Each person also had to rank the readings to indicate which one he thought was most likely to be meant for him personally. Later we interviewed the sitters to find out how they arrived at their decisions.

As we said, one of our rather unusual procedures, not often possible in this kind of experiment, was to check with sitters' relatives in Iceland about the validity of Hafsteinn's statements. In some instances, the older relative would recognize names and other facts which the younger one did not. One sitter, after we had thus rechecked with her relatives, reconsidered her ranking in the light of the new information; she herself had not known that she had relatives with the names Hafsteinn mentioned.

RESULTS AND FORTHCOMING EXPERIMENTAL REPORTS

When all the readings were quantitatively evaluated, they were shown to have acceptable non-chance results. So we concluded that Hafsteinn's "communications" do in fact justify a paranormal interpretation.

Kundalini energy, symbolized in ancient Indian texts as a sleeping serpent coiled at the base of the spine. This energy, Gopi Krishna says, is the biological basis of religious experience and genius. It is also the source of psychic powers, extreme longevity with good health, and, when awakened without proper guidance and preparation, of madness and the evil geniuses of the world.

If that were all Gopi Krishna had to say, it would be nothing new. Others have said it since earliest times. But Gopi Krishna says something which hasn't been said before, and it is of a scientific nature. Kundalini, Gopi Krishna says, is the evolutionary mechanism and energy in man — a biological part of everyone. And this can be demonstrated scientifically. We can get objective evidence that will show in empirical terms what has been the essential claim of religions throughout history — namely, that man was born to attain a higher state, a state of union with the divine.

Gopi Krishna's mission is to arouse scientific interest in the nature of enlightenment, which is the final result of the Kundalini process. He seeks to ground our understanding of Kundalini in Western concepts and terminology through scientific and documentary research. Thus, what is usually an occult matter in the ancient texts will be demystified and explained in clear, simple terms.

The texts speak of esoteric matters such as prana (the primal energy of the universe) and chakras (nerve centers in man along the spine and in the brain which are transformed as Kundalini energy rises).

The key to Kundalini is its close proximity to the sexual organs. There is a direct connection, via the spine, between the brain and the organs of regeneration. This connection serves as the channel for transforming sexual energy into spiritual energy. Ordinarily, Kundalini energy is used only for procreation. But through certain yogic practices, and through disciplines developed in all the world's genuine occult traditions, Kundalini energy can — with God's grace — serve for creation. The nervous system can be transformed. And since it is the body's link to consciousness, the state of human awareness is thereby transformed.

The signs of an awakened Kundalini, then, are: changes in the nervous system, changes in the chemical composition of the blood and cerebrospinal fluid, changes in the operation of the sexual organs, digestion and other metabolic processes — all due to nature preparing the organism for a higher state of being.

Gopi Krishna describes these matters in terms compatible with Western scientific knowledge. This is a daring approach to the most sacred subject, but the times demand it. Some scientists are becoming interested enough to undertake Kundalini research, and Gopi Krishna is now consulting on several projects. It is beautifully ironic that science, apparently godless, is being used as the vehicle to lead people back to God.

In America, Gopi Krishna is represented by the Kundalini Research Foundation, 10 East 39th Street, New York, NY 10016. This is a non-profit organization devoted to promoting greater knowledge of the subject.

It is probable that religion, even more so than politics, is a field in which the human mind has been so warped and cemented in dogma and restrictive ideas through biased opinions and prejudices of parents and society that it is almost impossible for a new or different idea to find acceptance, however beneficial or logical it might be.

Because of this condition, religious groups and individuals have in past years been able to brainwash government officials and legislators into approving their beliefs and doctrines and rejecting anything else which is contrary to that which has been established as an acceptable form of worship in that particular community.

It is with the greatest admiration that we recognize the foresight and vision evidenced by those revolutionary leaders who penned the United States Constitution and its amendments so as to provide for certain freedoms and to secure for future generations the right to worship their God, or some universal power, by whatever name they chose to call it, in whatever manner they might select to do so.

It is true that some of these freedoms have been restricted due to emotional witch hunts, religious persecutions and unwise enforcement of illegal ordinances. However, capturing the vision of the framers of our constitution, our judiciary has proven to be the last bastion of justice. As in the case of Judge Patton's decision, they have held firm to their trust and preserved for all mankind one of its most treasured and sacred rights. We salute such judicial towers of strength and are grateful for their wisdom and the protective arm which they place about our citizens to guarantee to as yet unborn generations a heritage of religious freedom found nowhere else in the world but in these United States.

BERNADENE'S PREDICTIONS

Time and time again, the predictions of Bernadene have proved to be among the most accurate statements of any psychic since Babylonian psychics began predicting eclipses 4000 years ago. We present below a list of a few of Bernadene's earlier predictions which have already come true, and also some new predictions which our readers would be well advised to bear in mind during the coming weeks and months.

First, here are the earlier predictions: She predicted that:

- danger around Henry Kissinger (A gun recently discharged near him when he was on a plane);
- the killer quake in Peru;
- a rash of major airline crashes (Six have occurred within a few weeks.);
- loss of crops in Texas and Louisiana because of violent storms;
- the kidnapping of a high government official and the demand for power instead of money;
- the trouble banks are now having;
- a major oil find in North America (Oil was found in Mexico);
- a new wave of bombings in the U.S. (These have occurred at stock brokerage firms and at supermarkets);
- Leon Jaworski's resignation;
- Ted Kennedy's decision not to run for president;
- a fall in the prices of both gold and silver;
- big oscillations in the stock market;
- more scandals and problems for well-known politicians (Rockefeller and Wilbur Mills have had them).

Now, here are some events to watch for in the relatively near future:

- many more changes on the While House scene;
- Ford will not remain President for very long;
- the discovery that Hale Boggs is still alive and that he had knowledge of a conspiracy against the U.S. in which $40 million of foreign money is involved;
- another gasoline shortage;
- a new oil discovery in the U.S.;
- impossible demands by mid-eastern countries, creating more tension.

I have a hunch about Columbia, and I haven't told anyone what this hunch is, but we will know by next July.

P In an interview that we've done with Dan Fry, he talks about the Atlantean Fire Crystal which he believes is the cause of the disappearance of airplanes and ships in the Bermuda Triangle. I'm wondering if you have come across anything like that. It would be similar to a laser gun, programmed to protect that area and to protect the things that are there.

T Well, Pat, I don't believe that is quite right. We learned that the people who disappeared were actually absorbed by the energy field where the molecules were broken down. These people belonged there and they were not destroyed. The ships and airplanes may have been destroyed, but not the people. Selective programming? Why not. Everything about this place is strange ... weird.

P Do you feel that they're going to come back eventually — that they will, somehow, be found?

T According to the trance mediums and what came through, these people will come back ... "the resurrection", as it was called. When I talk about "the resurrection", I am not talking about the end of the world, but rather about the time when the whole world learns about the existence of these temples, and when you can see them with the naked eye. If they do rise above water level, then these people will be back ... in human flesh.

P Do you think they are going to be reincarnated, or have they been in suspended animation for this period of time?

T I'm glad you said "suspended animation". This is what we feel it is, or something like that. They are not dead. They are still alive, but in a different form.

P All right. This is what Dan Fry thinks, too. He did interviews with the parents of some of the boys who disappeared in army airplanes over the Triangle. Several of them feel that their boys are not dead.

T I heartily concur!

P Which leaves a lot of questions as to where they are ...

T Pat, there are lots of questions still unresolved. The people who have been absorbed by the shield are right now in a sort of limbo, or a suspended animation. But when these people do come back, and see their parents, wives, and husbands, they are not going to have the same attitudes or emotional feelings or be in the same frames of mind as when they left. They will have gained certain kinds of knowledge. They will be changed in many ways.

P Well, this happened even with the POWs who came back from Viet Nam — they did not come back into the same situations and were not the same people.

T Now, whether the people in the Triangle will have more "enlightenment" remains to be seen. I don't know if they will or not. According to my own theories, though, they should have total recall of past lives pertaining to this area in which they are absorbed.

P Do you think that there is any community around that area, or is it just a city of the ancient past?

T We don't even know that it's a city. I feel as though it was once a community of some sort. It could have been, say, one of the universe's largest libraries. It could even possibly be a memorial center. We don't know, but we doubt that it is a city as we know it.

P You think it was more a place for storing records than it was a habitat?

T Primarily, yes.

P Well, in a lot of the Cayce readings and in the stories of Atlantis, they feel that Atlantis is gradually going to rise.

T If it does, Pat, I hope that we are not around to see it. Think of the havoc it would create in the world. It would just about wipe out a great part of the civilization we know today. Cities and entire nations would be destroyed if such a land mass rose out of the ocean, replacing and pushing away the water that covered it. That water has to go someplace.

P That's right; it does. It's been said that much of America will be under water, eventually, because if Lemuria rises on one side and Atlantis on the other, the land in between them must go down or under water.

T I can't help but chuckle to myself when you say that, because when America goes under water, don't you think that 400,000 years from now America will be legendary like Atlantis is today? History repeating itself!

P And so you think that the records of Atlantis may be stored in that underwater pyramid?

T Someone's records. I don't know if it is Atlantis we are exploring, but there are strong indications of it.

P Are you picking up any of this information through the mediums who are working there?

T Yes, plus some "artifacts" that have come into our possession. We have a tablet that measures 6 feet by 11 feet, showing the heavens as they were 400,000 years ago. Some of the astronomers that we showed this to say it was accurate at that time, but that the heavens have shifted to some extent since then. One thing that excited them and excited us too, although we don't know quite what it means, is that there were three planets shown on the tablet, which are not in our solar system today.

P I've heard rumors from various places that there are at least two more that are to be discovered. We don't know about them today, and astrology will have to be modified when we do.

T According to the way the planets were positioned on the tablets, the distant planets were shown smaller and the closer ones were shown much larger. It's these larger ones that don't exist today. If they did, we could see them with the naked eye or with our present-day telescopes.

P Why do you suppose we don't see them? Are they still in existence or are we being blocked in some way from seeing them?

T I believe that one planet may have been either a dark planet or else a second moon of the Earth. It was shown with shading through it, and it seemed to be the more dominant of the other two. We have read recently in the newspapers about black holes in the universe. The thought that crossed our minds was, "Could this be a planet in another dimension that we are looking at?" Very possibly. The astronomer's calculations put the three planets in three black holes.

P If someone could hide a city from the world for this long, I suppose they could learn to hide a planet. I know it sounds pretty far out, though.

T Pat, it's not that far out. Another molecular structure, water, is being used to hide the pyramid and surrounding buildings from the naked eye. So, why can't a planet (or three planets, for that matter) be hidden by using another molecular structure to make them look like three holes in the universe — three black holes?

P Yes, and a lot of comment has been made about the punctures in the universe that our country's and other countries' rockets have made, and also the effect that this is having on our atmosphere.

T You know, the Hindus have a theory that the Earth is going to implode. It's going to collapse into itself, and then we will reach another dimension. Whether they believe this holds true for the universe, I'm not sure. But if it can happen to the Earth, then why can't it happen to another planet?

P I've heard rumors about some mysterious hidden cylinders. Do you know anything about them?

T Yes. We picked up something about them from the mediumship readings. We learned that there is a great cylinder in Alaska and another one in South America, and that the one in South America will be found first.

P Do you have any idea what the significance of these cylinders is?

T The cylinders a source of tremendous energy — a type of energy that in our own technology today we know nothing about. It's another field of science which we haven't even touched on yet. I feel that when we're ready for it, it will be given to us or we will find it again. But the power of this cylinder is so great that it can be either used for destruction or for good. There are four cylinders, according to the readings. Put all four together and you have power over the world. And maybe over other worlds as well. It's God-like!

P Are these cylinders made of crystal?

T As far as we have determined, they are. In the readings, the term was "glass", "glass-like" material. This could mean crystal. They are said to be clear and without color.

P Have you seen one of these?

T No, I haven't ... yet.

P As to the tablets, do you have any idea when the public is going to be made aware of the information they contain?

T No, I don't. Until we find the key to decipher them, we don't know what they say; we don't even know if we have them right side up. But as soon as we do get the information, it will be published. First, we will want to make sure that it's verified and authenticated so that there will be no errors. We do believe that what we have found, and what we will find, is going to have a profound impact on the entire world, in one way or another.

P So many people — fishermen and so forth — have seen pillars and posts in the ocean around the island of Bimini. Yet, as far as I know, archaeologists have refused to investigate them, even though they know about them.

T Pat, the reason for this is that it is now forbidden by the Federal Government to go into that part of Bimini. People are kept out of there. Fortunately, our expedition is not very near this forbidden area.

P I understand that an engineering firm has bought part of that area and is doing research work there.

T I'm not familiar with them at all. One thing I would like to say here, though, is that we do run across organizations and individuals who say they have some information that will be of help to us, and so far, all of what they have offered has been of no value to us whatsoever. Most of it is theory, much of it is through "channeling". But what we really need is something concrete that we can hold in our hands and examine. Something we can seen on film, such as the material we already have on film. We need information from reputable institutions and organizations, such as the Smithsonian Institute or some of the archeological foundations — information about anything they ha found that is even remotely similar. I don't care if it's a crystal coin or even a nail. This is the kind of proof we are seeking. "Channeling" is fine; you do get information from it, but we have found it very laborious and very time-consuming. If a Master has something to say about Lemuria or Atlantis or any other ancient civilization, let him say it directly in 5 minutes, instead of 30 years. Let him tell us where to find positive proof. The only proof that we can go on is something tangible, something that we can hold or see, not theory and not just "Well, I feel this" or "I feel that". It's very unrewarding. We have organizations who want, they tell us, to share information with us. Yet they really have nothing to share. And again I say: "I want to see something tangible. I want something that will defy modern analysis." THERE lies the challenge for mankind!

P How can these other organizations go about getting the proof?

T By doing the same thing we're doing: going out after it.

P In other words, actually verifying what they have coming through in their channeling.

T Right! Now that I know more about Cayce and his readings, I can't see why somebody really didn't start investigating as soon as the information and maps were drawn out. This is what we hope to do. We're going to use his material, if we can get more of it. Another thing that we need, if any of your readers would be interested in helping us, is the one big thing needed in any type of project: money. If they want to contribute, fine. It's tax deductable. Make checks out to the church and write the word "Pyramid" at the bottom, and mail it to: Universal Christ Church, 1704 W. Venice Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90006. Any amount will help. When we publish our findings, all contributors will be listed by name and city and state.

P Will you be making more expeditions, then, after this one?

T Yes, we will. Not just in the Triangle. We have two planned for the other part of the seven. And we are going to Columbia next May, I believe it is. You mentioned the Crystal Skull awhile ago, Pat. I'm going to divulge some confidential material to you because I feel now that it might have some relationship. We have a crystal tablet that looks blank until you put a light through the side. Then, writing of some sort becomes clearly and distinctly visible. One other thing that I'd like to tell you, Pat, is that we have a great deal of information on Mt. Shasta, including the location of the entrance leading inside the mountain. We haven't been able to check into this yet. We're taking one thing at a time. As soon as our expedition to Columbia is finished, we're going to start planning an expedition into Mt. Shasta. Perhaps, Pat, you will come with us? ● ● ●

Here is a book as complex and individual as you are. It's not light reading because it's your life, your astral biography, from the details of your inner feelings to your outermost ambitions.

Sun-Moon polarity, as the connection between conscious drives and unconscious feelings, is discussed at great length.

The ascending sign and its rulership position is interpreted as your personality, as your approach to life. Each house of the zodiac is described in terms of planets, rulerships and aspects.

This is not a vague report based on generalities. From your exact time, day, year and place of birth our IBM 370-155 sorts out 24,000,000 bits of astrological information. The result is a 12,000 word personal biography revealing secrets that even your closest friends would not dare talk about.

How is this possible? An astrologer does basically the same thing, but it takes longer and costs more. The computer is simply a memory bank. Only the information that applies to you and only you is drawn from the bank.

All this is yours for only $10. It's the best buy there is in computerized horoscopes. Plus a money back guarantee if your Astral Portrait isn't what you expected.

Think of it as a reference book, to be studied from time to time. We've got the best available, anywhere, at anytime...and at any price.
